Cost of Living.

Bradstreet's index numbers show that the tariff-made trusts are still advancing staple prices, although food crops were never larger. In September 36 prices were advanced, while 25 were lessened, and 44 remained unchanged. The prices of sheep, hogs, bacon, cheese, sugar, tea, potatoes, apples, quinine and tobacco and 26 more staples were increased. It is estimated that the cost of living has been, or will be, advanced by the trusts this year fully 10 per cent. over that of last year. The present index number of Bradstreet is the highest reached since October, 1900.

Since 1896 the cost of living has been increased fully 40 per cent., and the Dingley high-tariff organs are claiming that they have advanced wages proportionately. The hollowness of this claim is apparent to any wage-earner, and no argument is needed. Low prices, say the tariff and trusts organs, mark hard times, but the truth is, they or their associates in the Dingley robbery scheme want high prices for products and low salaries for wage-earners. Wages in short have not been advanced 40 per cent. since 1896, although products have been. Wages, in other words, are lower than they were in 1896, because Dingleyism on products outpaces them. Dull as times were in 1896 the wage-earners were getting higher wages than they do now, simply because the greed of the tariff-created trusts has advanced prices of articles, and is holding them firmly up despite the great harvests of the present year.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Will Disband or Move Away.

[Paris Gazette.]

The Blue Grass Gun Club, of this city, is badly powder burned, and will disband or seek new grounds, when its lease on the White tract expires on the first of March next.

Councilman O'Brien did it with his little ordinance prohibiting live bird shooting. There isn't any starch in the sport now, and the razzle-dazzle hangs above the portals of the Club House.

An effort will be made to unite with the Lexington Gun Club and purchase or lease grounds along the Interurban in the vicinity of Muir Station. If the deal goes through a stock company will be organized and modern traps, rifles, ranges and commodious Club House constructed. A committee from each of the clubs will be appointed looking towards an organization. Some members of the Paris club are in favor of each maintaining its separate organization, but owning the grounds jointly. In this way many interesting matches can be arranged. As the Lexington Club is not yet incorporated, articles drawn up looking towards the organization of a club with purpose far beyond those of ordinary gun clubs.

If this is perfected, what's the matter with Muir having several other attractions, wherein tables with waiters with long white aprons will figure? Indeed, a Buckroe Beach may be established there, minus the swish of waves and the presence of sea-going ships!

And to think that Councilman O'Brien's humanitarian ordinance will be the cause.

Great man, that Councilman O'Brien.

THE MURDER MYSTERY

Toils Tightening Around Slayer of Two Girls.

Mason's Attorney Places No Faith in the Statement and Will Attempt to Show That the Negro is the Guilty One.

Boston, Nov. 8.—Miss Clara A. Morton was murdered at Waverly last Saturday. A few days later Alan G. Mason, a rich merchant and prominent club man of this city was arrested on suspicion. The girl's watch was sold to a jeweler on Monday by a colored man. A few days later the colored man was arrested and said that Mason gave him the watch to dispose of for him.

Boston, Nov. 10.—George L. O. Perry, the Negro who pawned the watches taken from the murdered women, Miss Clara A. Morton and Miss Agnes McPhee, declared Sunday that Alan G. Mason, the rich merchant of Boston, is the man from whom he received these articles. Perry was taken to the jail in East Cambridge, where Mason, under arrest on the charge of killing Miss Morton, is confined pending a hearing in the Cambridge court Monday. In one of the jail corridors Perry positively identified Mason as the man who had given him the two watches. Mason, by neither look nor word, betrayed any knowledge of having seen Perry before. When questioned by Sheriff Fairbairn, Mason merely said: "I do not know this man; I never saw before."

During the day Chief Ryan and Officer Argy of Belmont, talked with Perry, and later State Officers New, Dunham, Dexter and others took Perry to the jail. The callers were shown into the room where Mason and six others were in line. Perry walked straight up to Mason, who was second in position, and, pointing his finger at him, said:

"This is the man who gave me the watches to pawn."

He was about to leave the room when Sheriff Fairbairn asked him if he would not like to talk with Mason in order that he might make himself sure that Mason was the man. Perry replied there was no need of that, as he knew who the man was and had known him for a long time.

On being returned to his cell in the police station Perry was confronted by three newsboys and they identified him as another newsboy.

Another visitor at the police station was Mason's attorney. He was accompanied by a woman. This woman did not see Perry, but it was understood that she had been produced by the defense in the hope of showing that Perry himself or some other Negro was the real "Jack the Sluggo." She is one of the women who were followed by a Negro in Cambridge several weeks ago. Mr. Ware places no faith in the statement of Perry that it was Mason that gave the boy the watches. By arrangements made Sunday night Perry will be arraigned Monday at Cambridge on the charge of being accessory after the fact. The police say that Perry had been confined at the Lyman school for boys, having been convicted for assault and battery upon a young woman in this city.

Also it has come to light that on Sunday, July 27, Perry, who was then employed as the driver of a mail wagon from Cambridge to Boston, was missing from his work. It was on this date that an assault upon Miss Ellen Murphy occurred.

EVACUATION OF SHANGHAI.

Reported Germany Has a Secret Understanding With China.

London, Nov. 10.—The Daily Mail and the Daily News Monday morning throw doubt upon the reality of the reported settlement of the evacuation of Shanghai. The former paper hints that Germany has a secret understanding with China in the matter, while the latter journal declares that Emperor William's visit to King Edward is concerned with this question and with an endeavor on the part of Germany to secure a quid pro quo for German quiescence, while Great Britain completes her arrangements with Portugal with reference to Delagoa bay.

The Daily News further accuses the government of imperiling the British position in China. In order to secure the barren concession of Delagoa bay, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain is determined, according to the Daily News, to obtain a working agreement with regard to Delagoa bay at whatever cost.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

A Host of Congratulations and Gifts Received By the Sovereign.

Sandringham, England, Nov. 10.—The weather here Sunday was perfect and mild, and the bright sunshine brought crowds of visitors to Sandringham on the chance of seeing Emperor William. The approaches to the church were lined with spectators. Queen Alexandra, the prince of Wales and Mrs. Chamberlain arrived at the church together. Half an hour later King Edward, Emperor William, Prime Minister Balfour, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain and other distinguished persons arrived and stood chatting outside. King Edward talked with Mr. Chamberlain for a few minutes, then the emperor of Germany approached and for a quarter of an hour the emperor and Mr. Chamberlain stood apart and conversed earnestly. The service had begun and the anthem had been reached before the royal party entered the church, the king taking the emperor's arm.

The bishop of Ripon preached on the possibility of the disappearance of race distinctions and the attaining of the grand brotherhood of men. He referred to King Edward's recovery from his illness; to the visit of his kinsman monarch and to the ties which have long united Germany and Great Britain.

During the day King Edward received a host of birthday congratulations and gifts. Emperor William gave him a valuable vase.

EIGHT WERE INJURED.

Wagon Containing 12 Persons Run Into By a Street Car.

St. Louis, Nov. 10.—A wagon containing 12 persons was run into by a street car at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Howard street Sunday night and eight were injured. The crowd attracted made an attempt to lynch the motorman and car conductor, but the police interfered. The wagon was turned over by the collision and the occupants thrown in every direction. Loretto Sefton, a year-old girl, was instantly injured and was taken to a hospital. The others received severe bruises, but were able to go to their homes.

A crowd soon collected around the crushed wagon and some one shouted, "Lynch the car crew." Instantly a rush was made for the conductor and motorman. Several policemen rushed to the rescue and by threats to shoot kept the crowd back until a patrol wagon could be taken. The car men were then taken to the police station for protection.

BOILER BLEW UP.

Two Men Killed and Pumping Station of Water Supply System Wrecked.

New York, Nov. 10.—Two men were killed and one of the pumping stations of the city's water supply system in Queensborough totally destroyed Sunday by the explosion of one of the two big boilers which furnished power for the pumps. Those killed were:

W. Dihoy, the engineer of the plant, and James Nelson, the fireman. The building was ripped to pieces. Bricks from it flew a distance of a thousand feet or more while the boiler which exploded was hurled 200 feet from its bed. The other boiler, which was not in use at the time, was lifted from its foundations and thrown a hundred feet in the other direction. The body of the engineer was hurled about 150 feet from a spot where he is supposed to have been standing. Scaling of the boiler is supposed to have caused the explosion.

COAL FOR THE NAVY.

Total Amount Purchased Last Was 382,040 Tons.

Annual Report of Adm. Bradford, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Repairs of the Navy Department.

Washington, Nov. 10.—In his annual report, made public Sunday, Adm. Bradford, chief of the bureau of equipment and repair of the navy department, takes occasion to renew his protest against the action of the department in substituting a naval constructor for a line officer at ship-building works. A naval constructor, he says, is a non-seagoing officer. Inquiries as to the custom of the merchant marine in this matter, the report says, shows that the construction of merchant ships generally is supervised by the most experienced master mariner and chief engineer in the employ of the owner. It is an anomaly to build a ship and prepare her for sea under the supervision of a landsman.

The report does not touch on the question of additional coaling stations or of wireless telegraphy.

The total amount of coal purchased during the year was 382,040 tons at an average cost of $5.81 per ton, against $7.01 last year. This is the lowest price paid for coal since 1898, when the average was $4.63. The amount used was 18 per cent. larger than the preceding year. The amount used for storing purposes has increased more than five times during the past ten years. The report notes the gratifying fact that foreign coal purchased decreased 10 per cent. while the amount of domestic coal used increased 34 per cent. Special attention is called to the fact that 48 per cent. of the entire coal consumption was for auxiliary purposes.

Exhaustive tests were made during the early part of the year by the torpedo flotilla at Norfolk of various kinds of Virginia coal to determine the best adapted for the use of torpedo boats. The result showed little difference when the coal was carefully selected.

KILLED HER HUSBAND.

Jealousy Over a Nephew Lead to a Tragedy Sunday Morning.

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Mrs. Enoch Hink shot and killed her husband at their home, about three miles above Port Dickinson, Sunday morning about 4 o'clock.

Hink was 53 years old, his wife is 40. They have been married 23 years. For some time Hink has been jealous of a nephew, Frank Hink, who has boarded at the Hink home. Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Hink and Frank Hink came to Binghamton. Mrs. Hink and Frank drove home alone. About 2 o'clock Sunday morning Hink, who had arrived home some time previously in an intoxicated condition, quarreled with his wife, and made an assault upon her. She ran out of doors in her night dress, barefooted and, pursued by her husband, ran down the road. He was armed with a clasp knife. Finally, in the darkness, Mrs. Hink eluded him and, going back to the house, barricaded her bedroom. Hink went back and when he tried to open the door to renew the assault, the woman took up a shotgun and pointed it at her husband. It was discharged, the charge entering Hink's breast just above the heart.

PITCHER HARRY ALLEMANG.

Shot and Mortally Wounded at Mason, W. Va., By a Burglar.

Pomeroy, O., Nov. 10.—Harry Allemang, who pitched in the Southern League this season and who has signed with Cincinnati for the coming season, was shot and mortally wounded at Mason, W. Va., his home, early Sunday morning. Allemang had been out with friends and was returning home when he found burglars at work in the post office. A sentry on the outside ordered Allemang to halt. No attention was paid to the command and the sentry fired on Allemang, the bullet entering his back and lodging in the left lung. When Allemang had fallen to the ground the robbers took $980 from him.

DEATH OF DR. ROBT N. TOOKER.

He Was Widely Known as a Writer on Medical Subjects.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Dr. Robert Newton Tooker, one of the prominent physicians of Chicago and president of the Illinois Homeopathic Medical association, died suddenly Sunday of apoplexy. When a servant found his body lying on the floor in the bath room the physician had apparently been dead several hours. Dr. Tooker, who was 61 years of age, was widely known as a writer on medical subjects.

The Alabama and Massachusetts.

New York, Nov. 10.—The United States battleships Alabama, Capt. C. H. Davis, and Massachusetts, Capt. H. N. Manney, sailed from this port Sunday for Culebra island, in the Caribbean sea, where they will participate in the winter maneuvers.

In Honor of King Edward's Birthday. Panama, Colombia, Nov. 10.—At noon Sunday the British, American and Chilean men-of-war in the bay fired salutes of 21 guns in honor of the anniversary of the birthday of King Edward.

AFTER THE LADRONES.

Vigorous Methods to Suppress Them to Be Adopted.

Manila, Nov. 10.—The government is adopting vigorous measures to suppress Ladroneism in the provinces of Cavite, Rizal and Bulacan. A zone embracing these provinces, and surrounding Manila, is the scene of constant petty and, sometimes, serious disorder. Several armed bands, some of them numbering two or three hundred men, are operating in the described districts and have committed various depredations. They find a safe refuge in the mountains. The plan of the government contemplates securing the assistance of the military, which has been inactive since the end of the insurrection. The extent of the army's participation in the work of suppression depends upon developments. It is probable that the military authorities will request the garrisons to protect the more important towns, while the constabulary conduct the field operations. It is thought that the martial law, in a modified form, will be declared and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus suspended in Cavite province, which has been the home of the Ladroneism for ages.

Military control of Cavite province is not contemplated. It is intended that the military and civil authorities shall work in conjunction. The belief is held that advantage has been taken in some parts of the island of the complete inactivity of the soldiers, and it is thought that the use of the army by the civil authorities will have a beneficial effect.

The vigorous campaign against the Ladroneism, which has been conducted by volunteers in Bulacan province, has resulted in driving many refugee bandits into Rizal, where the campaign is now opening.

Gen. Davis is co-operating with Gov. Taft. He has strengthened the garrisons in Rizal and is supporting and assisting the native constabulary which is now afield. The operations in Cavite province will commence shortly.

TONS OF VOLCANIC ASHES.

The Decks of a Steamship Covered to the Depth of a Foot.

San Francisco, Nov. 10.—The Kosmos line steamship Luxor, from Hamburg, reports an unusual experience at San Benito, the lowest port of Mexico, October 25. Thirty tons of volcanic ashes from the volcano of Mt. Quemado fell on her decks. She was anchored off shore awaiting lighters that were to be used in transferring her cargo.

Without warning the sky darkened until it acquired the pitchy blackness of a starless night. Then began a gentle rain of soft ashes, which soon covered the liner's decks to a depth of several inches. The fall of ashes continued until early in the morning of October 28, when the decks of the Luxor were a foot in powdered pumice stone. Mt. Quemado, from which the ashes came, is about 70 miles from San Benito.

COLLISION ON THE N. & W. ROAD.

Engineer Killed and His Remains Burned to a Crisp.

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 10.—N. & W. fast express No. 4, bound from Columbus to Norfolk, Va., had a head-end collision with an extra freight train miles north of Williamson early Sunday morning. Owing to the heavy fog that prevailed the engineer of the passenger train failed to see the danger signal and when the collision occurred his train was running near 50 miles an hour. John Snyder, of Plattsburg, W. Va., express messenger, was instantly killed. The injured are Abe Jackson, engineer, and J. C. Eakins, fireman. They live in Kenova and each is in a serious condition. The baggage and mail car caught fire and Snyder's remains were burned to a crisp. Traffic was delayed 12 hours.

TWO SAFES DYNAMITED.

About $600 Was Stolen and the Building Damaged Fully $6,000 Worth.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 10.—At an early hour Sunday morning the office of Walker & Stratman, soap manufacturers, on Horrs island, was looted by burglars. Two of the four safes in the office were dynamited, about $600 stolen and fully $6,000 damage done to the building. The office building is some distance from the manufactory proper which enabled the burglars to do their work unmolested by the watchman and the dozen or more workmen who were on the night turn. No clue to the robbers has been found.

Shot and Killed Himself.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 10.—John McAtee, aged 24, a clerk in the office of the Kansas City Southern railroad, killed himself here by shooting. Officers found his body when they went to serve a warrant for McAtee's arrest, charging him with attempting to rob a fellow employee. His mother, Mrs. Julia Long, lives at Louisville, Ky.

He Lost.

A Quaker city gossip tells this story of a young man who apologized for being late at a dinner party: "Awfully glad to see you, Mr. Blank," said the hostess. "So good of you to come. And all the way from New York, too! But where is your brother?" "I am commissioned to tender his regrets. You see, we are so busy just now that it was impossible for both of us to get away, and so we tossed up to see which of us should come," said the young man. "How nice! Such an original idea! And you won?" "No," said the young man, absently; "I lost."—Pittsburg Bulletin.

A Surprised Physician.

A dying patient recovers through the interposition of a humble German.

Chicago, Nov. 15. Some weeks ago Dr. G., a very reputable and widely-known physician, living on C— Street, was called to attend a very complicated case of Rheumatism. Upon arriving at the house he found a man about forty years of age, lying in a prostrated and serious condition, with his whole frame dangerously affected with the painful disease. He prescribed for the patient, but the man continued to grow worse, and on Sunday evening he was found to be in a very alarming condition. The knees and elbows and larger joints were greatly inflamed, and could not be moved. It was only with extreme difficulty that the patient could be turned in bed, with the aid of three or four persons. The weight of the clothing was so painful that means had to be adopted to keep it from the patient's body.

The doctor saw that his assistance would be of no avail, and left the house, the members of the family following him to the door, weeping. Almost immediately the grief-stricken ones were addressed by a humble German. He had heard of the despair of the family, and now asked them to try his remedy, and accordingly brought forth a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. The poor wife applied this remedy. The first application eased the patient very much; after a few hours they used it again, and wonder of wonders, the pain vanished entirely! Every subsequent application improved the patient, and in two days he was well and out. When the doctor called a few days after, he was indeed surprised.

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

Case No. 49,673. Mrs. M. Isted of 1207 Strand Street, Galveston, Tex., who is proprietor of a boarding house at that address, numbering among her boarders a dozen medical students, says: "I caught cold during the flood of September, 1900, and it settled in my kidneys. Despite the fact that I tried all kinds of medicine and was under the care of physicians, the excruciating twinges and dull aching across the small of my back refused to leave, and trouble with the kidney secretions began to set in. From then, ordinary Anglo-Saxon fails to describe the annoyance and suffering I endured. The fearful pain through my body, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, consequent loss of energy, and, finally, an indication of complete dissolution compelled me, from sheer agony and pain, to either lie on the floor and scream, or forced me into spasms. On such occasions, my husband called in a physician, whose morphine treatment relieved me temporarily. I grew weaker and thinner, and so on down physically that nothing was left but skin and bone. All my friends, acquaintances, and neighbors knew about my critical condition, and on one occasion I was reported dead and they came to see my corpse. At last the doctors attending me held a consultation and agreed that if I did not undergo an operation I could not live. Preparations were made, a room selected at the city hospital, and they even went so far as to have the carriage brought to the door to carry me there. I don't know why, but something told me not to go, and I absolutely refused. Now I want the reader to grasp every word of the following: A friend of ours, a Mr. McGaund, knowing that my kidneys were the real cause of the entire trouble, brought a box of Doan's Kidney Pills to the house, and requested me to give them a trial. I had taken so much medicine that I was more than discouraged, and had little, if any, faith in any preparation. However, I reasoned if they did not do me good they could not possibly make me worse, so I began the treatment. After the third dose, I felt something dart across me like a flash of lightning, and from that moment I began to improve. The pain in my back and kidneys positively disappeared, the kidney secretions became free and natural. At present I rest and sleep well, my appetite is good, my weight has increased from 118 to 135 pounds, and my flesh is firm and solid. My friends actually marvel at the change in my appearance. Words cannot express my own feelings. I am not putting it too strongly when I say I have been raised from the dead. I am satisfied that had it not been for Doan's Kidney Pills, taken when they were, I would have been either lying in the Lake View Cemetery, or an invalid for the balance of my life. I will be only too pleased to give minutest particulars of my case to any one calling on me, not, of course, out of idle curiosity, but if they really have kidney complaint and want to know what course to pursue to get relief."

DEPARTED GLORY.

How sad I used to be in those old days away back there Before I knew the world was full of hidden snares and care; I thought it was a task to hold the skein as mother would The crimson yarn while here and there a stubborn snarl was found; I thought my lot a dismal one, as sitting there at night I heard the humming spinning wheel and watched the firelight Dance out across the floor and back as fairy dancers might.

Ah, how I used to long to see the world I'd read about, To pack my little carpet-sack and boldly saily out! Reluctantly I used to bow my head upon the chair When father found that it was time to say the evening prayer, And thinking that my lot was hard—ah, how absurd it seems— I went up to my little bed beneath the white-washed beams, And, far away from worldly cares, had proud, ambitious dreams.

Oh there is much that I have learned about the world since then, And much I've seen that serves to wake the wonderment of men; The world is far more splendid than I dreamed that it could be As lying 'neath the rough-hewn beams fair visions came to me— But one great glory of the world has passed away for ever, I never again may hold the skein as mother winds back there, Or, when the fire's low, kneel down while father offers prayer.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

A GARDEN PLOT.

By Julia Truitt Bishop.

TWO very faint-hearted young people were looking at one another over the back fence of the vegetable garden—she in the garden among the cabbages, he outside in the seldom used street. Between them was the fence, with its green burden of butter-bean vines. Practical, every-day life and hard realism could go no further.

"Of course, if you say so, I'll go to my paternal ancestor and speak to him about it," said the young man, resignedly, adding the reservation, "at least I'll kind of hint to him. I might as well take out a good slice of life insurance before I start. But if I do go you've got to promise that you'll go to your mother. I'm not going to run all the risks!"

"Oh, yes, I suppose I'll have to go," said the girl, desperately. "And I'm just as afraid as I can be. I know there's some plot against us. Your father came to see mamma yesterday about something, and mamma just looked at me awfully after he had gone. I've been afraid to speak to her ever since!"

"Maybe they're going to send you back to school again," was the savage remark from across the butter-bean vines. "I won't have it, Nell, and that's the end of it. If it comes to that, we'll run away!"

"Oh, Tom, we can't!" came a frightened whisper over the same barrier. "I'll—I'll speak to mamma—and see you here to-morrow evening. Or why not come to the house! Mamma never has said you couldn't, you know."

"Oh, but the way she looks at me!" was the tragic response. "Not by a whole lot, Nell! We'll trust to these cold-hearted cabbages instead."

Whereupon the two parted with such evidences of affection as the vines permitted, and went valiantly forth to make confession.

Nell found her mother writing at her little desk in the corner; but at Nell's approach Mrs. Grayson shut and locked the desk with a snap, and turned an accusing face upon her daughter. Anger had made her face very red. There was no doubt that she knew all! Nell's heart beat a hurried double tattoo, and her nicely composed, dutiful little speech died on her lips. All that she managed to say was "Mamma!" But she did that with such an emphasis that appalled her. Mrs. Grayson turned pale.

"You had better go to your own room," she said, with austere dignity, "and remain there until you can listen to reason and talk over matters calmly."

Mrs. Grayson swept out of the room, and thus abruptly ended Nell's confession.

Tom, gifted with a knowledge of men that should make him a diplomat some day, waited until Col. Drane had eaten a remarkably good dinner and was stretched at ease in a capacious chair, as he could see through the window. What he did not see through the window was the perplexed frown upon the colonel's brow—a frown which hung there in spite of the dinner and the chair. Tom was in the room and advancing upon the enemy in good order before he saw the frown, and immediately his ranks were thrown into confusion. He faltered. "I'm gone!" he said to himself. What he said out loud was, "I have come to speak to you, sir, about a certain matter—"

Quick as a flash the colonel was up, with an apoplectic look on his countenance.

"You will do nothing of the kind, sir!" he shouted. "I know exactly what you would say! Well, sir, you needn't say it! My mind is fully made up! Not a word, sir! You may as well be damned!"

And thus abruptly ended Tom's confession.

Early the next morning the butter-bean vines received two new experiences—the one very tearful and the other full of very determined laughter.

"She sent for him to-day!" sobbed the tearful one. "I know I'll be sent away now. I heard him talking loud in there, and telling her something about not paying any attention to two children."

"You are 18, and I am 23," said the laughing one. "Two good-sized children, I should think—especially as the colonel was married at 20. I have the license in my pocket, Nellie. Run and get your hat and come around to the side gate. We'll go up to Mr. Morrison's and be married. He's been married lately himself, and I'll know how to sympathize with us."

"Run away? Oh, Tom, let's not run away!" was the frightened whisper that came out of the cabbage garden.

But the young man on the other side of the fence had the license, and, besides, he had the girl's heart. It began to be apparent that there was no other way. The end of it was that Nell came out of the side gate, trembling at every sound in the house she had just left, and she and Tom started off hand in hand, like two children.

"Oh, I feel certain she'll overtake me!" she cried presently, in a panic. "Let's run—we can beat them both running!" suggested Tom. And so they both ran, holding each other's hand, and laughing, because they were not very old, and running away seems a kind of joke to 18 and 23.

They arrived at the Rev. Felix Morrison's quite breathless and full of laughter; and Felix Morrison's girl-wife laughed with them, and clapped her hands on hearing that they were going to be married right away. The Rev. Felix himself demurred. They were both very young—had they presented the matter properly to those who had authority over them?

"Oh, that's all right!" said Tom, cheerfully. "We've done everything we could—begged and implored and entreated—they were hard as a rock. Here's the license—Mrs. Morrison can witness—fire ahead!"

"Now do, Felix!" begged the little wife on the other side. "They love each other—almost as much as you and I do. Suppose anything had kept us apart?"

The mere supposition of such a thing set the minister's lips, and sent a spark into his calm blue eyes. "Stand up!" he said.

It was at this awful moment that they heard the sharp click of the gate-latch, and Nell cast a terrified glance between the lace curtains. The light of the street lamp showed two figures hurrying up the walk.

"Oh, here they both come!" cried Nell, in an agony of fear. "They've followed us! Oh, do save us, somebody!"

"Here, into the back parlor!" Mrs. Morrison was already pushing them under the portieres. "Now do keep still!" she warned.

"If you can throw them off the scent," cried Tom, running back and wringing the minister's hand. "If you could just lie a little—"

"He can't, but I can!" said Mrs. Morrison, eagerly. "Here they come—what's the use if you don't keep out of sight?"

Col. Drane and Mrs. Grayson might easily have noticed that there was an air of subdued excitement in the parlor to which they were admitted, that Mr. Morrison's hand shook, and that a look of indignation and high resolve was on Mrs. Morrison's face. But the truth was, they did not notice it, for they had larger matters in hand. How guilty did the Reverend Felix feel when he saw Col. Drane cast a stony glance around the room!

"Very pleasant weather," said the Reverend Felix, with an air of deep impressiveness.

"Very!" said the Colonel, dryly. Tom, in the back parlor, groaned in spirit at the sound of that voice.

"I thought this morning that we should have rain," ventured Mr. Morrison, firmly; "but the clouds—"

"Ah, yes!" said Col. Drane, curtly. "But we come up to see—"

"Certainly!" Mr. Morrison hastened to assure him. He felt that he could hear Tom and Nell breathing in the back parlor.

"Now for it!" whispered Tom, holding Nell carefully to keep her from fainting. "The worst will be over in a few minutes!"

"The fact is," said the Colonel, fixing the unhappy minister with his eye and speaking in an awed voice and with a very red face, "Mrs. Grayson and myself have come up to be married!"

Rev. Felix Morrison tottered against the mantelpiece in the front parlor, and Tom tottered against the mantelpiece in the back parlor, but the Colonel went on, belligerently. "We have chosen this method because we do not wish any gossip or remark, and because my son and Mrs. Grayson's daughter have shown themselves so plainly opposed to any hint of it—"

Mrs. Felix Morrison had gone off into the back parlor and into hysterics, and was laughing and crying at a great rate. Tom had set Nell down in an easy chair, and was rubbing his chin with his hand as well as he could for a most dignified grin.

"If the young people are opposed to it," said Mr. Morrison, chokingly, "would it not be better to wait awhile and gain their consent?"

"No, sir, it would not!" roared the Colonel, testily. "They have been holding secret meetings and plotting against us for days! I do not propose to be dictated to by two such snips of children! Here is the license, sir. We are both of age, I think. Mrs. Morrison can witness!"

And then, as they stood up, two figures swooped down upon them and stood facing them, side by side, holding each other's hand.

"Well, father," said Tom, severely. "I must say I am scandalized. Running away to be married! And at your time of life!"

"Tom!" ejaculated the Colonel, "What—what—"

"I wouldn't have thought it of you, mamma!" said Nellie, with much spirit. "To think of you doing such a thing without saying a word to me!"

"A pretty thing this will be to get out!" remarked Tom, regarding his father, gloomily. "How is a young fellow to get up in the world if his father runs away and gets married every time he takes a notion?"

"And what an example to set before me!" said Miss Nellie, primly.

Mrs. Grayson had already sank into a chair and buried her face in a handkerchief, and now the Colonel sank into another one close by. He felt very weak.

"Now that you both know it, Tom," he said, feebly, "I don't mind waiting and being married quietly at home some evening. If you hadn't shown such determined hostility—"

"We'll have the wedding at home," said Tom, willing to show a forgiving disposition. "And while we are about it we will have a double wedding—you and Mrs. Grayson, Nell and I."

"You! You two!" cried Mrs. Grayson, emerging from her handkerchief. "We two," announced Tom, airily. "But you didn't catch us running away." He spoke with a lofty moral tone, at the same time giving the Reverend Felix a furtive kick.

The Colonel had taken time to digest the statement, but he now broke out with a roar of laughter, slapping his knees.

"You two!" he roared. "Great Scott! Who ever would have dreamed of it! How did you keep it so close?"

After which Mrs. Grayson and Nell were forced to go into the back parlor and give their personal attention to Mrs. Morrison, who seemed about to collapse.—Woman's Home Companion.

Both Were Shocked.

Little Elsie was a faithful attendant at Sunday school, and had listened earnestly when plans for a coming Christian Endeavor convention were discussed, her interest increasing to enthusiasm over the mysterious affair when she learned that her auntie was to attend as a delegate.

Coming into the library one day, auntie saw the little maid busily engaged in writing a letter to her cousin with whom she kept up a juvenile correspondence.

She scrawled industriously for a moment, then stopped. There was a puzzled expression on her fat ink-stained face, as she dangled her short legs and wriggled uncomfortably on her high perch.

"Auntie," she said, "how do you spell 'devil'?"

"Oh, Elsie," said her auntie, "I am shocked! Why are you using such a word as that in your letter? Nice little girls never say such things!"

"Why, auntie," she cried, "I'm only telling her about the Christian and devil convention!"—Harper's Magazine.

The Modern Child.

The modern child is the most discouraging thing I know about. Just the other day I undertook to entertain a small neighbor of mine while her mother passed the afternoon in bed with a sick headache. Naturally, I assumed that the little girl would enjoy looking at a prettily illustrated book of fairy tales which had just come into my possession. She took the book politely and sat down to look at the pictures. When I looked up she was staring at me with a question in her eyes. Seeing me disengaged, she put it into words:

"Here's a very pretty picture," said she, pointing out, or rather indicating, for she's too well trained to point, to a wash drawing of Titania and her attendant fays. "They're very pretty, but will you please tell me whether they're angels or just insects?"—Washington Post.

Quaint Marriage Customs.

A quaint marriage custom has, unluckily for the brides of to-day, fallen into disuse. It was once incumbent on the bridegroom to place a sum of money in a purse on the wedding night and present it to the bride. Afterward this was done the following morning, and the gift was called the Dow Purse. Another phase of the same thing existed in Cumberland, where the bridegroom provided himself with gold and crown pieces. At the words, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," he gave the clergyman his fee and poured the rest of the money into a handkerchief which the bride held out. In other places it was the custom on the day following the marriage for the bride to ask her husband for a gift of money or property, and he was bound in honor to grant her request.—Scottish American.

Willing to Sacrifice Himself.

"Doesn't that rigid position make you tired and uncomfortable?" asked the artist.

"Yes," replied the ambitious politician, "it does; but I am willing to suffer the inconvenience. This is the pose in which I wish to be known to posterity."—Chicago Tribune.

ADJUT. GEN. CORBIN, in his annual report, strongly condemns the early marriage of young army officers. He recommends the repeal of the act prohibiting the sale of beer in the canteens. It was a New York, not a Mississippi, that made such a determined effort to lynch a negro for attempted familiarity on the street with a white girl. After all, doesn't the only difference between the mobs of the two sections lie in the fact that the Southern mob usually delivers the goods? In both, a like cause produces a like desire. Anglo-Saxon blood is not a matter of geography.—Louisville Times.

THE Winchester Democrat tells the way to do it: The merchant, who is a persistent and steady advertiser, who describes his wares in a manner that will carry conviction to the public, need have no fear of the city or mail order houses. People want to know what you have to sell, and if put before them in the proper way, there will be no trouble in disposing of the goods.

Nearing Completion.

The new Christian church is nearing completion. The decorators are now at work on the inside, the concrete pavements around the church and the sidewalk in front have been completed. The yard has been graded and the other work, both inside and out, is progressing nicely and with good weather and no bad luck the handsome structure should be completed by the first of the new year.

The Bourbon Home Telephone Company threw open its exchange Saturday to the people of Paris. About 200 of the 'phones in the city are now ready for operation. ## ADAMS—LAUGHLIN.

A happy concourse of friends and relatives assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Laughlin, near Connorsville, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to witness the marriage of their daughter, Miss Katherine Penn Laughlin, to Mr. Thomas Adams. The rooms were artificially lighted, the windows being darkened. The ceremony was a very happy one, and was gracefully performed by Rev. H. L. Cockerel, of Scott county. The wedding music was very artistically rendered by Miss Nannie Davis, who played the usual Mendelssohn march as the bridal party entered the parlor. The attendants entered first, they being Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Laughlin, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Laughlin, of Paris. Following them came the bride and groom, who advanced to the waiting minister. After the ceremony, congratulations were extended and Mr. and Mrs. Adams at once were driven to Cynthiana, where they boarded the train for Lexington, whence they left for Louisville.

The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of brown broadcloth, trimmed with white taffeta silk and velvet. She wore hat and gloves in harmony and carried a pretty bouquet of roses. The bride is an estimable young woman, and the happy groom is fortunate, indeed, in winning her heart and hand.

The groom is an excellent young gentleman, being the son of Mr. W. F. Adams, who is a prominent farmer of near Connorsville. On the return of the bridal couple a handsome reception will be given them at the home of the groom's parents.

REGRET TO LOSE HIM.—Mr. Geo. W. Robards, who has been in the harness business here for some time, has decided to move his business to Elizabethtown, Ky. Mr. Robards has made many friends in Bourbon and we regret to lose him as one of our citizens. We can recommend him to the people of Elizabethtown as a good citizen and business man.

Nearing Completion.

The new Christian church is nearing completion. The decorators are now at work on the inside, the concrete pavements around the church and the sidewalk in front have been completed. The yard has been graded and the other work, both inside and out, is progressing nicely and with good weather and no bad luck the handsome structure should be completed by the first of the new year.

Ready for Business.

The Bourbon Home Telephone Company threw open its exchange Saturday to the people of Paris. About 200 of the 'phones in the city are now ready for operation. It will be only a short while until everybody's 'phone will be in working order. We understand that there will be about 800 subscribers in the first directory issued. From what we can hear, every 'phone that is in working order gives perfect satisfaction.

The Interurban.

Sunday was an ideal day for driving and about 40 people took advantage of the opportunity to drive out and see where the interurban people have been grading. Dolan & Sons who have the contract for grading the roadbed are pushing the work, they are now within three miles of Paris on this end and about the same from Lexington at the other end. Ties are being hauled and laid in position near Monterey, if the good weather continues it will not be long until the grading will be completed. In all probability the road will be in operation by May 1st.

ADAMS—LAUGHLIN.

—A happy concourse of friends and relatives assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Laughlin, near Connersville, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to witness the marriage of their daughter, Miss Katherine Penn Laughlin, to Mr. Thomas Adams. The rooms were artificially lighted, the windows being darkened. The ceremony was a very happy one, and was gracefully performed by Rev. H. L. Cockerel, of Scott county. The wedding music was very artistically rendered by Miss Nannie Davis, who played the usual Mendelssohn march as the bridal party entered the parlor. The attendants entered first, they being Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Laughlin, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Laughlin, of Paris. Following them came the bride and groom, who advanced to the waiting minister. After the ceremony, congratulations were extended and Mr. and Mrs. Adams at once were driven to Cynthiana, where they boarded the train for Lexington, whence they left for Louisville.

The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of brown broadcloth, trimmed with white taffeta silk and velvet. She wore hat and gloves in harmony and carried a pretty bouquet of roses. The bride is an estimable young woman, and the happy groom is fortunate, indeed, in winning her heart and hand. The groom is an excellent young gentleman, being the son of Mr. W. F. Adams, who is a prominent farmer of near Connersville. On the return of the bridal couple a handsome reception will be given them at the home of the groom's parents.

THE GOOD-NATURED MAN.

Here's to the man who has nothing to do, who chatters and chuckles the busy day through. He bothers your work and he hinders your nap, and if you get angry he cares not a rap. He likes to come 'round in a casual way, with nothing to do and nothing to say. He tells you the story you don't want to hear, He tells you the news that falls flat on your ear. For time that is precious has ruthlessly fled, And the family is waiting at home to be fed. You wish him all joy that a lifetime can view, But you wish that he wouldn't make merry with you. And he goes on his way with a look of regret, When your work has been spoiled and your plans are upset. And because you're unmoved by his humorous prank He says it's a pity you're such a sad crank. -Washington Star.

Ellison's eyes brightened, for, looking past his visitor's head, he saw a door open a few inches at the further end of the room, and part of a face appear. He made some signs, and while Job was fumbling in the pockets of his vest, a man entered noiselessly and stepped behind the curtains of a closet, against which the table was placed where the two were seated.

Ellison, keeping his eyes steadily fixed on the little man, saw that he was still trying to get at the paper, which he had evidently concealed with extraordinary precautions.

He finally extracted what he was looking for, and, opening the document, which seemed to be old and time-stained, stood up, and, leaning over the table, opened it, holding it in one hand, while with the other, extended, he seemed to be guarding his possession.

"Here is the document in the case," he said; "you may look, but you mustn't touch," waving Ellison back. "See and read; there is no reason why you should take it in your hands."

Ellison read the paper over, which, from the signatures and the wording, left no doubt of its genuineness.

He sat back in his chair, and sighed, saying, after a pause:

"Yes, there is no doubt that you hold me in the hollow of your hand with the document that I signed with Martin Frale nearly 17 years ago. Come closer and listen. I want you to hear something that perhaps should be whispered, for a hotel is all ears, as one might say."

Job leaned forward to hear what this revelation was, leaving the precious document on the table. He had hardly moved when a hand reached out from behind the portiere over the closet, took the paper quickly, substituting another in its place, and then a man emerged from his hiding, and slipped out of the room without being heard by the others, deep in whispered conversation. It was only after he had gone that Ellison suddenly rose, and, changing the calm tone in which he had been speaking, brought his fist down on the table with a bang.

"It's no use, Mr. What's-your-name, your attempting to bully me. I don't believe in the existence of the copy of the agreement."

"But you saw it before your eyes?" "I never saw anything of the kind."

"I laid it out before you. Here it is," and, reaching over, he picked up the paper that had been placed there and opened it, while Ellison seemed to enjoy his surprise.

"That terrifying document! Where is it?" he exclaimed, displaying a wild hilarity as Job opened the paper he had picked up and showed that it was blank.

"Now, then," harshly, "what do you mean to do, you scoundrel? You threaten me with your pieces of blank paper."

Job had retreated to the door. He showed evidences of fear at the other's vehemence.

"It was not a blank piece of paper that I showed you, Mr. Ellison; it was merely a copy of the original, which your confederate gathered in, and which he is privileged to keep!" and then, with a laugh, he opened the door quickly and went out.

CHAPTER XIII. TRICKED.

James Ellison was so surprised at the sudden turn of events, and the thought of how neatly he had been tricked, that he could only stare at the door through which Hendricks had taken his triumphant departure. He had been congratulating himself on his cleverness in securing possession of the agreement, only to find out that it was but a copy.

He was roused from his moody thoughts by the clicking of a door latch, and his brother entered the room, waving a paper gayly in the one hand, while he hummed a song. "Well, James, my boy, you see that I am good for something after all! How neatly we tricked the old fellow," dancing up and down the room. "You are an ass!" exclaimed his brother, sententiously, turning with a scowl, as if he resented his companion's ill-timed hilarity. The other came over to him and looked at him in wonder. He was much younger than his brother, and good looking in a reckless way. In his smart clothes and smooth-shaven cheeks, it would have been hard to recognize him as the wild and ragged being who a few days before had claimed his brother's hospitality at Exton.

"What's the matter, Jimmy?" he asked, fumbling the paper in his hands nervously. "Matter enough!" growled the elder. "The rogue fooled us with a copy, and that is what you are now holding in your hand. He had evidently made arrangements to fool us."

"The dence!" and the brother unrolled the document and examined it carefully. "Bless me if you ain't right!" and then, tearing it up with a gesture of rage, tossed the pieces in the grate. This done, he dropped down sullenly into a chair near his brother, and for some minutes neither of the men said a word. Finally James Ellison rose, and, coming over to where his brother was seated, said in an earnest voice:

"I tell you what it is, Frank; this fellow annoys me, and I wish you would take steps to relieve me of such an incubus—that is, I mean to get possession of that paper. I don't want him harmed, you know."

"He is a cunning rogue, whoever he is," replied the other, thoughtfully.

"Cunning; of course he is, and for that reason I am interested in clipping his claws. Actually, I have not enjoyed a good night's sleep since he appeared. I thought, when Briggs arrived with the interesting news that he was an escaped convict, that I had him sure. From the way he acted, I am convinced that Briggs simply concocted the story in order to have something to show, since he blundered when I set him to watch the man."

"That may have been mere bravado."

"Well, if that is true, he is the best actor I ever saw, or the cunningest rogue. Now, you have had experience with such people—"

Frank Ellison adjusted a gold monocle and stared at his brother with well-affected astonishment.

"Really, my dear boy, I am at a loss to know what you mean by such vulgar insinuations."

James Ellison knocked over a vase on the table as he made an angry gesture. "Don't provoke me—you are not performing—just remember your audience, if you please. Now, I never bothered my head about the people you consorted with."

His brother arose and said, with a sneer:

"Are you trying to show me how much more respectable you are than I? Well, we both started out in life to gain a living by our wits. You were lucky enough to marry an heiress, while I was forced to live as I could, brought up to no trade or profession, with a good education and a taste for a luxurious life, and no means to gratify it."

"There, there," said James soothingly. "I had no intention of hurting your feelings, but I simply stated the case that I wanted you to do what you could to get possession of this paper. Don't you see that this impudent scoundrel holds me up?"

"But suppose he is the escaped convict?"

"Bah! I believe that is all moonshine, invented by that smug rascal, Briggs. I don't put any faith in what he may say in the future."

"Well, what do you want me to do?"

"I want you to find out, if you can, who this fellow really is. If it is true, as Briggs says, that he is that celebrated criminal, you can get some of your (he was going to say 'friends,' but hesitated) police friends to identify him. For the fellow seems careless and moves around in broad daylight as if he had nothing to fear."

"And what do I get out of this?" asked Frank, as he eyed his brother keenly.

"Get out of it?"

"Yes."

"Why, anything you want," replied James Ellison.

"That's rather a broad statement, isn't it?" and Frank laughed.

"No, it is not. I don't want this matter hanging over me, and I would give half what I own to be rid of the incubus."

"Indeed?" skeptically.

"Oh, I mean what I say. Come, now, Frank, don't act in an absurd manner—you know that you are under obligations to me."

"That is a poor way to begin when you want a man to do you a signal favor."

"Well, I thought that you perhaps needed touching up a bit on the subject."

"I know exactly who my creditors are and whom I owe," grumbled Frank, for the references to his obligations seemed to stir him up and fill him with a muntious spirit.

"It isn't money I want," he said at length, with long-drawn emphasis. "I want you to stop protecting this young man, Barnett. Why on earth do you want to mix in on that affair, anyway?"

It was James Ellison's turn to be surprised.

"I don't exactly understand you," and he watched his brother, as if wondering what he should hear next.

"I believe I talk plainly enough," and Frank lit a cigarette and blew a smoke ring in the air, watching it fade into nothingness with a dreamy expression, as if in deep thought.

"Well, it is an enigma to me," replied James Ellison. "Why shouldn't I do what I can to help a young man whom I have protected, and who certainly is not guilty of the crime they accuse him of?"

"If I were as impolite as you, I should address the same remark to you as you applied to me but a moment ago," replied Frank, with a drawl. "If you want me to do what you have directed—to find this fellow who calls himself Hendricks, to get possession of the document of adoption—I have but this to say: I will do it on one condition."

"And that is?"

"That you leave matters as they are, and don't attempt to interfere with the course of the law."

James Ellison leaned over the table and eyed his brother for a moment anxiously.

"What on earth are you trying to get through your head, I should like to know."

Frank Ellison shook the ashes of his cigarette, and responded, with a smile:

"I believe you are the thick-headed one in this instance. I say that you must stop your interference in this affair. I acknowledge that, as the bereaved husband, you are anxious to protect the accused, and to find the real—er—er—unfortunate who secured you the fortune."

James Ellison laid his hand on his brother's shoulder, and the look on his face was far from pleasant as he said:

"You know that I had nothing to do with that."

"Nobody said that you had, and yet it has turned out well for you, after all," and Frank blew a big puff of smoke into the air. "I believe the late Mrs. Ellison had a tight fist, and that it was hard to get her to sign checks—there—there," as he saw that his brother appeared to be deeply moved, "I don't want to open a fresh wound, but, at the same time, I am stating cold facts. I am a cold, unfeeling person, as you have probably discovered before this."

"In Heaven's name, what do you want, man? I wish you would be quick about it!"

The other coolly tossed his cigarette in the grate before answering, then he looked at his brother a moment, and gave vent to a loud laugh. "Why, I never saw you so much moved in my life," said he.

"I want to know what you mean?"

"You mean you want to know what my terms are for securing that document and otherwise suppressing in a gentle manner the little man who has been annoying you."

"Yes."

"The renunciation of all attempts to help young Barnett."

"Anything else?" and James Ellison eyed his brother, as if he was in fear of what he would say next.

"I think that is about all for the present," said the other, calmly.

"In fact, I should like things to go against him, if possible," continued Frank. "I would like him out of the way."

"You puzzle me more and more," murmured James Ellison.

"Why not come out flat with what you mean?"

"Ah," replied the other, with a laugh, "I surprise you, do I? Well, I am a fellow of infinite variety, as you might have discovered long ago, if misfortune had not separated us—or, rather, fortune in your case divided us."

"I am waiting to hear what you have to say," replied James, who now had become sullen through the references to his fortune.

"Well, I have taken a great fancy to your daughter, and I don't mean, if I can help it, that this young clodhopper shall have her."

Ellison rose, and, while his lips moved, not a word came from them. Frank, seeing how perturbed he was, broke into a noisy laugh.

"Why so surprised, my excellent brother? She is not your daughter, and, after all, there are cases of an uncle marrying his niece. I might add to the list of freak marriages. Now, the case stands in this light, and you may look as horrified as you please. It is my desire to marry the girl—to stop your amiable interferences with the course the law is taking. If you refuse, why so much the worse for you. Who knows but I may go over to the other side."

and, with a malicious smile, he left the room, while his brother, as if stricken with a sudden palsy, stared after him, unable to utter a word!

CHAPTER XIV.

A BIRD OF THE NIGHT.

Pleasant avenue is a little New York street facing the East river that has long ago ceased to deserve such a complimentary appellation. Principally filled with empty houses, that at one time must have been occupied by people of wealth and position, it has fallen into a state of ruin and decay, while the road proper is filled with debris and almost impassable to wagons.

There are a few people who live there, because the rents are so cheap—hard-working people, not particular as to their dwellings so long as the rates are not ruinous, and evidently not possessed of a delicate sense of smell.

It was in a little house, at the end of a long garden, reached by passing through the wagonway of an empty factory, that Job Hendricks had established himself for some days.

While he had succeeded in outwitting Ellison for the time being, he thought that now the war between them would be waged with it would no longer be safe for him to remain in the vicinity of Farrenford. For the present he might let matters rest, and there was other work he had cut out to do, that necessitated his presence in the city. So it was that he came to occupy the little cottage at the end of the long garden at the bottom of Pleasant avenue. It was little more than a pavilion, with two rooms on the ground floor and two above. He bought a few pieces of simple furniture and moved in, occupying the upper rooms. The others he left to the mice and spiders. At least, he could not believe that he had prying neighbors, for they worked too hard all day to bother themselves about the affairs of others, and since he had moved in in the evening, and the house stood out of sight behind the tall factory, it was doubtful if any but a few knew that the house in the garden was occupied. So it was that he felt genuine pleasure in his retreat, for it seemed to afford a refuge where he could pursue his task without fear, and where he hoped, for the present, no one could find him out. To make matters safer, he had taken the precautions to change his appearance, so that even the worthy innkeeper at Exton would have had trouble in recognizing his former guest.

So far Hendricks had not been successful in his efforts to trace the man who had written the letter—the torn envelope of which had been treasured ever since. It bore a New York postmark, and he hoped that the writer was still in town, though it might be otherwise. At least, he might possibly come across one who knew where he was to be found. Though so far he had accomplished nothing, he still had hopes. A man of the type he was seeking must in time be found if he was in the city. Those of his class belonged to certain groups, and, however mysterious their movements, their presence in a place was always known.

WOULD FOREGO THRASHING.

An Attempt to Intimidate a Tarheel Judge That Proved a Signal Failure.

While Judge William M. Shipp was presiding in the court in Nash county, N. C., some years ago, a jury of "12 good men and true," according to the Tarheel Standard, brought in a verdict which the judge did not approve, and he told the jury that they had committed perjury or they were a set of fools and did not have sense enough to sit on a jury.

One of the jurors was a Mr. Westray, who had been graduated from the state university and was a large land owner, and was known as the most successful farmer in the county. He was indignant over the insult offered the jury and determined that for one he would not submit to it, provided he could resent it without going to jail. So at the recess for dinner Mr. Westray approached the judge and asked him, as a matter of law, appertaining to the prerogatives of a judge, if he, the judge, had any authority of law to say what he did to the jury.

Judge Shipp answered that he certainly did have that right by law, otherwise he would not have exercised it. Mr. Westray then put this question: "Judge Shipp, if I should here and now proceed to give you a genteel thrashing for what you said to the jury, would you take it like a man for your part as an individual, or could you fall back on your judicial prerogatives and put me in jail?"

The judge said in that event the prerogatives would come into play, and be mighty handy, and that he would board Mr. Westray at the expense of the county for two years.

Mr. Westray then said: "Very well, judge, if that be the case, we will forego the thrashing," and walked off.

The Lady of the Studio.

The "dummy" is still considered by some artists to be superior to the living model when it comes to posing for drapery in feminine costume, and many of these startlingly lifelike figures are found among the studios of painters. The lady of sawdust in the studio of Perceval De Luce, when dressed in fashionable garb, frequently causes some friend who chances to drop in to pause suddenly with the apology: "Oh, pardon me; I didn't know you had a sitter."

But this isn't a circumstance to the trick this dummy played upon a group of children when Mr. De Luce was moving from his old studio into the one he now occupies. The children stood watching the vans load at the door. When one of the men appeared carrying the dummy in his arms, the children watched with bated breath while he ran down the steps and carelessly tossed it upon the bottom of the cart. Then the largest of the group, a little girl ventured up to him.

"Say, Mister," she said, "did that lady die of smallpox?"—N. Y. Times.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

It is so easy to make friends that nobody has any that are genuine. A man knows he loves by what joys he feels; a woman by what she suffers.

It is the six-foot man with the square jaw what is led around by a little bunch of petticoats. An old wife and a young husband have one chance in a thousand to be happy, but they never take it.

It is the easiest thing in the world to make a woman understand a thing if only you won't reason with

NEW LIFE RAFT.

Subjected to Severe Tests and is Found to Be a Great Improvement Over Other Devices.

The steamer Valley Girl took 200 shipowners, yachtmen and others down the bay the other afternoon to witness a demonstration of the capabilities of the Carley life float. The float is easily handled without tackle or machinery of any description, and in the water will support more persons than could be crowded into a boat, besides being noncapsizable and nonsinkable.

The Valley Girl went as far as the Homer beacon, and then the raft was thrown overboard. It took two men to slide it off the deck and 16 men who had been taken on the steamer jumped off the deck, swam to the float and climbed in. The float used was five feet by eight, and 18 persons could ride inside. Men climbed on one side of it with the idea of turning the float over, but it still kept on an even keel and floated with the tide.

The float has been put on some of the battleships of the United States navy and on transports, and it will soon be used on some of the ocean liners. It consists of a copper tube with many air-tight compartments. Attached to this cylinder is a rope netting three feet deep, from which is suspended by rings a wood slatted bottom. The float is constructed in such a manner that no matter on which side it may fall upon the water the bottom falls through, as in its proper relation to the buoyant cylinder.

WHITE HOUSE TREASURES.

Valuable Pieces of Furniture Will Not Be Kept in New Executive Building.

Inasmuch as the new executive building is not fireproof, all of the long-treasured pieces of furniture belonging to the white house, and which were formerly in the president's offices, will be left in the executive mansion for safe keeping. President Roosevelt is having an office fitted up for his private use in the white house, and in it will be the massive oak table made from the timbers of H. M. S. Resolute, and presented to the president of the United States in 1881.

The Resolute belonged to the British government, and was one of the fleet of vessels sent in search of Sir John Franklin's arctic expedition. The Resolute was abandoned in the ice in 1854. In September of the following year it was sighted by an American whaler and taken to an American port, and was eventually presented by this government to Great Britain.

Another treasure to be carefully guarded is the clock presented by Napoleon to Gen. Lafayette and by the friendly general to the president of the United States.

Exhibition of Motor Vessels.

Consul R. S. S. Bergh reports from Gothenburg: According to the Göteborgs Aftonblad, there will be an exhibition of motor vessels at Malmo next summer. The place of the exhibition will be the new harbor, which will then be so nearly finished that water can be let in. The motor boats are to have full liberty to make trips with visitors to Helsingborg, Landskrona, Hven, Limhamn, Björred, Copenhagen, Skanör, etc.

A Complication in Names.

S. Leszczynski and M. Grzegorzowna have been licensed to wed. It should not be very hard, says the Chicago Record-Herald for the lady in this case to get used to her new name.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in my back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. ## THOUSANDS OF WOMEN ARE SLOWLY DYING FROM CATARRH

Miss Katherine Dauter.

November Colds Should Not Be Allowed to Develop Into Chronic Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Cures a Cold Promptly and Permanently.

"I am glad to recommend Peruna as it has done so much for me. I had been a great sufferer from catarrhal colds until I was urged to try Peruna, and I am happy to say that it has entirely cured me. I shall never be without it and most cheerfully recommend it to others who are afflicted as I have been."—Katherine Dauter, 239 13th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Most people think the success of Peruna depends upon the use of advertisements. Undoubtedly the advertisements help some. But by far the greatest number of people who hear of Peruna, have their attention called to it by a friend.

Some one gets cured of chronic catarrh by Peruna. After he is certain of his cure, he is sure to recommend it to his friends. Friend recommends it to friend and the news spreads from tongue to tongue.

All the advertisements in the world could not make Peruna as popular as it is. Peruna cures. That is the reason people like it. Peruna cures a very stubborn disease. That is why everyone recommends it. Peruna cures chronic catarrh after all other remedies fail, which explains why

Might Not Bother Him.
"Well," said the cheerful wife, who thought she had a soprano voice. "If the worst comes to the worst I could keep the wolf from the door by singing."

So Ambitious has achieved fame, has he?" asked the Philosopher. "He has," replied the Cheerful Chap. "Brilliant things said by other men are now credited to him."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Pe-ru-na Cures, That Is Why the People Like It.

All the Advertisements in the World Could Not Make Pe-ru-na as Popular as It Is.

Miss Margaret Donnelly, 21 Webster Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:
"Peruna was recommended to me about a year ago for catarrh with which I had been troubled nearly all my life, but which had given me serious trouble a few months before I took Peruna. In two weeks my head cleared up, I did not have headaches, and in a short time felt perfectly well."—Margaret Donnelly.

Miss Jennie Driscoll.

Pe-ru-na Cures a Cold Promptly and Permanently.

neighbor recommends it to neighbor. Peruna cures catarrh permanently, and this way has gained a life-long friend.

People who have been cured by Peruna many years ago have been eager to recommend Peruna to their friends ever since. This is the way Peruna is advertised. It advertises itself. Its merits are its chief advertisement. Once cured of so distressing and exasperating a malady as catarrh, it becomes the duty of every one to pass it along; to call the attention of those who are still victims, to a remedy that rarely fails to cure.

Beware of Cheap Imitations of Pe-ru-na—Be Sure That You Get Pe-ru-na.
There are no substitutes for Peruna. Allow no one to persuade you that there is something just as good. The success of Peruna has tempted many people to devise cheap imitations. Beware of them. Be sure that you get Peruna.

Miss Jennie Driscoll, 870 Putnam ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:
"I heard so much in praise of Peruna as a specific for catarrhal affections that when I found myself with a bad case of catarrh of the head and throat Peruna was the first thing that I thought of. And my convictions were not wrong, for in a few weeks after using Peruna systematically I was entirely rid of this aggravating and distressing disease, catarrh.

"If people knew how efficient Peruna was for this trouble they would not hesitate to try it. I have all the faith in the world in it, and have never known of a case where the person was not cured in a short time."—Jennie Driscoll.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

Tranquility.

Who does not love a tranquil heart, a sweet-tempered, balanced life? It does not matter whether it rains or shines, or what misfortunes come to those possessing these blessings, for they are always sweet, serene and calm.

The exquisite poise of character which we call serenity is the last lesson of culture; it is the flowering of life, the fruitage of the soul.

It is as precious as wisdom, more to be desired than gold—yea, than even fine gold. How contemptible mere money-wealth looks in comparison with a serene life—a life which dwells in the ocean of truth, beneath the waves, beyond the reach of tempests, in the eternal calm!

How many people we know who sour their lives, who ruin all that is sweet and beautiful by explosive tempers, who destroy their poise of character by bad blood! In fact it is a question whether the great majority of people who do not ruin their lives and mar their happiness by lack of self control. How few people we meet in life who are well balanced, who have that exquisite poise which is characteristic of the finished character?

The contest for the speakership of the next House grows more interesting. It is said the promoters of the Ship Subsidy Bill are endeavoring to choose the man. The fight for tariff revision is growing, and to gain this end the Western Republicans may combine on Representative Babcock for Speaker.

Gratitude.

A pretty little woman said recently: "I am just starting out in my profession and want to make a success of it, but I find it hard work. My father was always working to aid others and no one ever applied to him without getting encouragement in some shape. Yet now since I am starting out when I ask these same people to help me they are horribly absent-minded."

"My dear," explained a friend, "never expect gratitude. I knew a family once that kept a cow. Every day one neighbor or another would send over and beg for some milk and the favor was never refused. No matter how the family was stunted the neighbors got the milk and enjoyed the comfort of a dairy without keeping a cow. Finally the over-worked animal died. When the owner of the deceased cow sent from one to the other asking for a little milk they were invariably out. The man who after losing his fortune had only this advice to leave his son as a legacy had learned wisdom too late: 'Don't lend money, for when you are broke no one will lend you.'"

"Just see," thought the lawn, "how I have to take Autumn's leaveings"

Has His Appetite With Him.

There is one man in Carlisle county whom we are willing to put against the rest of mankind for a strong appetite. His name is Sam Winston, and he lives with Henry Webb. A few days ago Mr. and Mrs. Webb were away from home for a day, leaving Mr. Winston to prepare his own dinner. He went to the woods and came in with thirteen squirrels, dressed and cooked them and then sat down and ate them all for dinner, together with dumplings and other side dishes. When Mrs. Webb arrived at home in the evening she found that a fire had been kindled in the cook stove, and Mr. Winston asked her to please hurry supper, as he felt the awful pangs of hunger gnawing at his stomach. This is vouched for by Bob Kilgore and other neighbors.—Carlisle County News.

A Scholarly Milkmaid.

He overtook her on the roadside while wandering for his health in the Berkshires.

"At last," he said, "I have found a typical milkmaid of old New England. See her big sunbonnet, her dress up to her shoe tops, her plain but neat calico and the very pail itself. It is a morning for adventure, and I will speak to her."

He quickened his walk and was soon near her.

"Fine morning this morning," he said. "I would like to help you carry the pail."

There was no reply, but he felt the roguish smile that he knew was hid under the sunbonnet. So he kept on doing all the talking until they reached the lane into which she was about to turn.

"Can I go with you?" he asked.

She turned and faced him.

"No, sir; you may not, nor do I desire your attentions. It is bad enough to have a grown man splitting his infinitives, but when he shows his ignorance of the proper use of should and would and then caps the climax by using can for may I think it is only my duty to tell him that the summer school is in session about ten miles from here."—New York Times.
